Welcome

JULY is National Minority Mental Health Month. Considering recent local tragedies, we’re highlighting mental health in this issue and how you can take care of yourself and assist community members. These first two issues of our new newsletter are being published pretty close together, but in the future, you can expect the newsletter in your email by the first of the month.

National Minority Mental Health Month

MENTAL illness is something people don’t like to talk about, but it affects one in five adults and one in 10 children in the United States, according to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA). Mental illness is also a leading cause of disability, but almost two-thirds of people with a diagnosable mental illness do not seek treatment and racial and ethnic disparities in mental health persist. The 1 in 5 adults in America living with a mental illness, including Alzheimer’s disease and other cognitive impairments, creates a significant burden for the nation. With six suicides in Telluride and the surrounding area since the beginning of the year, San Miguel County now has a suicide rate about six times the national average.

ethnic groups in the U.S. are even less likely to get help, according to the National Alliance on Mental Illness.

With this in mind, National Minority Mental Health Month was created in 2008 to improve access to mental health treatment and services and promote public awareness of mental illness among minorities.

Minorities are less likely to receive diagnosis and treatment for their mental illness, have less access to and availability of mental health services, and often receive a poorer quality of mental health care, according to the U.S. Surgeon General. Non-Hispanic whites received mental health treatment two times more often than Hispanics, according to statistics from 2008.

Latino youth, particularly girls, have a high risk of having suicidal thoughts and plans. Suicide attempts for Hispanic girls in grades 9-12 were 70 percent higher than for white girls in the same age group, according to statistics from 2011.

Talk to your doctor about your specific health risk. You can get your blood pressure and cholesterol checked by your local Community Health Worker and get connected to any resources or care you may need.

Erich Lange (right) takes notes on an action plan with the audience and panel members during the Mental Health Panel on June 29.

“I think whether or not people have training or feel knowledgeable on the topic, you can still come from a point of view of empathy,” Lange says. “And if you talk about it in more of a positive and welcoming light, I think that’ll cause for a lot of stigma reduction and positive change in our community in regards to just talking about mental health and illness.”
July Recipe

Our Cooking Matters classes start July 5 at the Naturita Library in the community room until the West End Economic Development Corporation (WEEDC) Collective Mine opens. Classes are every Tuesday, 4 p.m. - 6 p.m., until August 9. You’ll learn how to cook recipes like this Barley Jambalaya.

Barley Jambalaya

Instructions

In Advance
1. In a colander, rinse barley under cold water.
2. In a medium pot over high heat, bring barley, water, and bay leaves to a boil. Reduce heat to low and cover. Cook barley until tender and water is absorbed, about 20 - 30 minutes.
3. In a colander, drain barley. Set aside.

Preparation
4. Peel, rinse, dice onions. Rinse and dice celery and pepper. Peel and mince garlic.
5. In a large pot over medium-high heat, heat oil.
6. Add onions, celery, pepper, and garlic to pot. Mix well. Cook until veggies are soft, about 5 minutes.
7. Add ground turkey. Cook until turkey is cooked through, about 5 minutes more.
10. Add cooked barley to the mixture. Stir to combine. Add more water or broth, if needed. Cook over low heat to blend flavors, about 5 - 10 minutes more.
11. Remove bay leaves and serve.

Tomando Teaches Chronic Disease Management

Tomando Control de su Salud is a free Spanish language self-management education intervention for people living with, or caring for people living with, a variety of chronic health conditions.

“We help guide people to have a better life with their chronic disease,” says Claudia Gamez, Bilingual Enrollment Navigator with Tri-County Health Network and leader of TCH-Network’s Tomando classes. “We’re doing it for the Latino community who aren’t more ignorant, but with the language barrier, they don’t get the help they need and this class is telling them step by step all the resources we have and guiding them through healthy eating, since they can’t go to the doctor and get that information in Spanish.”

Classes meet once per week for six weeks and address conditions such as arthritis, diabetes, heart disease, and lung disease.

“I took this class in Pueblo and leading the class is like taking it again,” says Gamez. “It really helped me make better decisions and changed my life a lot, because it’s got a lot of information on healthy eating, exercise, and step-by-step how to make a decision and come out with the right answer on what you want to do.”

For more information on Tomando and to keep up-to-date on the next time TCH-Network teaches Tomando, call us at 970-708-7096 or visit our website at tchnetwork.org/programs. For Spanish speakers who need help enrolling in Medicaid, CHP, food stamps, or need a translator at the doctor’s office, contact Claudia Gamez at 970-708-4456.

Rethink Your Drink

This summer, rethink your drink to stay hydrated in the heat. Sugary drinks are the leading single source of empty calories in young people’s diets and directly contribute to diet-related diseases including obesity and diabetes. Empty calories from added sugars and solid fats contribute to 40 percent of total daily calories for 2–18 year olds and half of these empty calories come from six sources: soda, fruit drinks, dairy desserts, grain desserts, pizza, and whole milk. Check out the infographic below and this handy chart from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) on ways to adjust what you drink.
